City Initiatives and Updates

City and Partners Unveil the Johnson Innovation Station

The City of St. John's and Genesis, with the financial support of the provincial and federal governments, announced a unique partnership to cultivate community, economic and entrepreneurial activity in the historic Railway Coastal Museum at 495 Water Street. The facility, now named the 'Johnson Innovation Station', will look to the future through the development of new business and technology while celebrating milestones of the past, through the operation of a seasonal Railway Coastal Museum. Genesis Co-working will occupy the top two floors of the building as a new home based for entrepreneurs, start-ups, freelancers, and remote workers to help bridge the gap between formal and home offices. Complementing the coworking model, the space will now become the new home of Genesis' Evolution program, a pre-incubation, idea accelerator, that works with start-up tech companies. Reminder Deadline Approaching for Downtown Pedestrian Mall

Planning to build a parklet for the summer?

If you own a business located inside the Pedestrian Mall, please apply for your parklet by May 31, 2021. This deadline will allow the City to identify vacant spaces inside the road closure area that may be available for other downtown businesses. There are two checklists available to guide business owners through the parklet application process www.stjohns.ca.

Municipal Plan and Development Regulations in Final Approval Stage

St. John's City Council has adopted amendments to Envision St. John's, Council's policy document for present and future land use and development. Envision was developed from an extensive consultation process and the comments of many interested citizens, community groups, property owners and businesses, with the direction of Council and the professional input of City staff. A virtual Public Hearing will take place regarding the Envision St. John's Municipal Plan and Development Regulations on June 9, 2021. Provide your comments to the Office of the City Clerk including your name and address to cityclerk@stjohns.ca by 9:30 a.m. Monday, June 7, 2021. While Council is not legally bound to accept the recommendations, Council does consider them seriously in its final decision on whether or not to make changes to Envision St. John's before voting on whether to approve it. Canada and PRNL Announce Project Recipients of ERF Offshore RD&D Funding

Project recipients of the Emissions Reduction Fund's Offshore Research, Development and Demonstration Program were recently announced. The program aims to accelerate emissions reduction and achieve net-zero emissions by 2050. Sixteen projects are receiving a total of $24.4 million from Natural Resources Canada, managed by Petroleum Research Newfoundland and Labrador, to investigate how to reduce greenhouse gas emissions from Canada's offshore oil and gas operations. The projects include companies that facilitate research, technology development and innovation for Canada's offshore. They explore ways to decarbonize offshore operations, including drilling, production and transportation. The pursuit of net zero within the offshore oil and gas industry will help drive innovation and economic growth for Newfoundland and Labrador.

New pathways to permanent residency

Applications are now open for the new pathway to permanent residence for essential workers and international graduates who are already in Canada on temporary status. These are temporary policies announced by the Government of Canada to grant residency to 90,000 temporary workers and students as part of its goal to admit 401,000 immigrants this year. Eligible applicants can submit their applications to Immigration, Refugees and Citizenship Canada online portal from May 6 to November 5 or until the limit is reached. Any foreign resident who graduated from a Canadian university or college within the past four years will be able to apply. Temporary foreign workers in 40 occupations related to health care will qualify. The Association for New Canadians (ANC) can provide more information, contact applyPR@ancnl.ca.
